The Value of Mediation

Resolving conflicts is a goal most of us have. However, it is not always easy. Often there are many issues which must be addressed, regardless of the context of the conflict.

Roles, rights, responsibilities and relationships need to be realigned and issues must be resolved in order to allow parties to move beyond the conflict.

Mediation offers people the tools they need to maintain control over decisions in their lives. Mediation encourages cooperation and participation of all parties in making the decisions that affect their lives, families, careers, and future. As a result, agreements are more inclusive and more likely to be honored by all parties.

Who Should Attend

Trained and experienced mediators who wish to enhance their mediation skills and techniques should consider attending this training!

- Diversity awareness.
- How to recognize and respond to ethical dilemmas that arise in face-to-face and online mediation.
